“One generation usually refers to a group of people born within a 25 years laps of time. But with my family, we’ve clearly brought this average rate down: my mother had me when she was 17 and Mamika my grandmother had my mother when she was 15. My grandmother says that in our family, our wombs fill with babies, the minute we get close to a man...”

So when Joy’s sister Lucy blurts one evening that Joy has a boyfriend, her mother and grandmother warn her that she will soon find herself with a baby in her arms. It simply runs in the family! But at 16, Joy has other ambitions for her near future. When, despite her precautions, she finds herself pregnant, she doesn’t hesitate, she is going to have an abortion. But in truth, going ahead with this life changing decision is extremely difficult.
