THE AUTUMN DANCE

September 2023

It's autumn, and the wind is blowing dead leaves through the forest. Our favourite little cubs decide to chase them around, but their game and appetite have them taking a little too many risks: Raspberry is stung by bees for trying to taste some honey, Blackberry gets thorns on his paws for wanting chestnuts, and Blueberry is covered in scratches for trying to reach some mountain berries. As for Gooseberry, she's inconsolable because she's lost her beautiful scarf.

When time comes for the four little cubs to go home, they can obviously rely on Mama Bear and Papa Bear to console and cuddle them. And of course prepare a wonderful snack with all the treasures they have brought back!

A BEARY CHRISTMAS

Already published

As Christmas draws near, four little bears decide to give their parents a gift. But what would be the perfect present? They ask them about their tastes: "Sunbeams and the blue of the ocean" says Mommy Bear; "The wind and the moon" answers Daddy Bear.

And so the children set off: Raspberry to the West, Strawberry to the North, Gooseberry to the South and Blueberry to the East. But capturing nature is not possible, and they all come back empty-handed...

Back home, they eventually give their parents the most beautiful gift: the happiness of being together, sharing laughters and drinking hot chocolate, while the snow is falling... but turns out nature still has a beautiful surprise for them!

STARRY SUMMER

Coming out in 2024

THE AUTUMN DANCE

By Zemanel & Emilie Michaud

Bientôt, le soleil est sur le point de se coucher.
— Il faut rentrer, dit Croisille. Par ici, je connais un raccourci.
Voilà nos quatre oursans devant le grand ravin.
Couché de tout son long, un sapin leur sert de pont.
Ils s'engagent sur ce dernier obstacle.
Un souffle de vent manque de les faire tomber dans le torrent.
Ouf... il s'en est fallu de peu.
Dans l'eau, deux saumons remontent le courant.

Les feuilles de chêne.
Aussitôt, les quatre oursans se lancent à leur poursuite.
Les feuilles dévalent une colline et finissent par se poser au pied d'un grand châtaignier.

Là, un marcassin ouvre les bourses de son grain.
— Le fruit est caché dedans, explique-t-il, prenez-en !
— Ça sent bon, dit Cassia, j'y vais !

Sitôt dit, sitôt fait, la gourmande glisse
sa patte dans la ruche.
Mais les abeilles, qui ne l'entendent pas de cette oreille, défendent avec colère leur précieux trésor.
— Aie, aie, aie ! grimace Framboise. Elles piquent !
— Venez, allons plus loin ! lance Croisille.

"It was a stormy night. The wind was so strong that almost all the sails of the three-masted ship had been torn apart. A great iron hand, rising from the bottom of the ocean, seemed ready to crush the ship. The noise was frightening..."

On one terrible night, an obsessive, prideful captain is faced with his crew's mutiny. Driven mad, the captain murders one of his sailors. As the blood flows, a strange shape suddenly rises from the waves, recues the crew, and condemns him to wander the seas for all eternity...

Since then, accounts have been made that off the Cape of Good Hope there was a ghostly ship that seems to fly above the waves...

By the author of Atlas des Fortunes de mer, translated into 4 languages, and illustrated by one of the official painters of the French Navy

Included a map and explanations about the origins of the legend!

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN

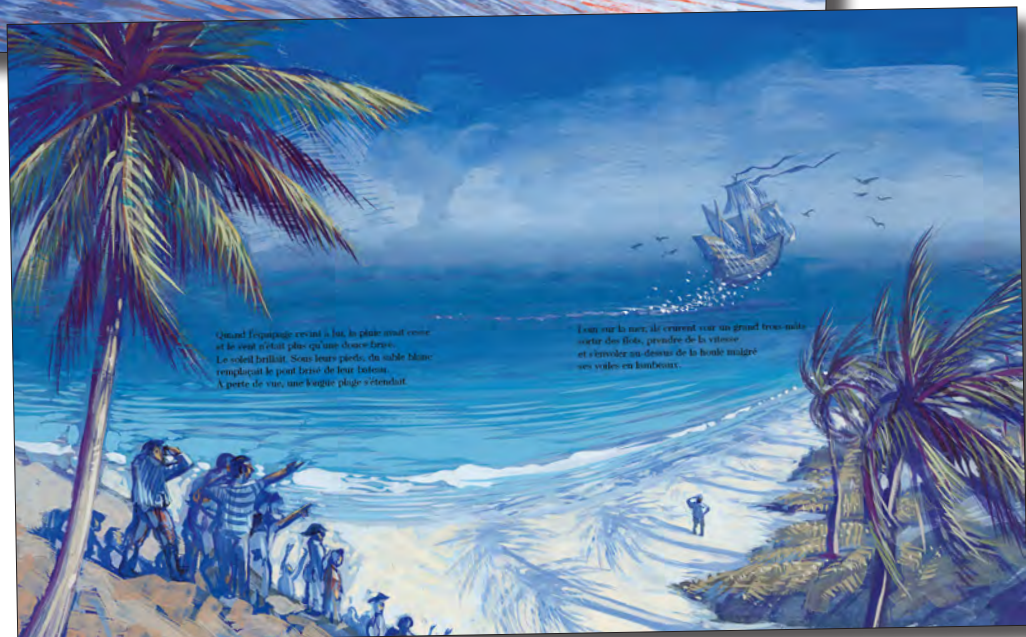

By Cyril Hofstein & Marie Détrée

A chaque plongeon du Galion dans la mer, de chaînes, des gerbes d'écume retombant de pont et d'autre, charriant des débris et du bois brisé.
En haut dans les vergues, des cordages arrachés flottaient dans les airs comme les pailles d'une énorme araignée. Tous les canons avaient été jetés par-dessus bord pour essayer d'alléger le vaisseau et, hélas, tout potable et les vivres allaient les rejoindre.

Au moment où son cadavre tomba sur le pont,
les marins entendirent l'explosion lui charrier
ces mots :
— La course sera donc éternelle, ô capitaine.
Puisque tu l'as demandé, le voili exauce.
Immortel, tu navigueras jusqu'à la fin des temps, volant sur les vagues comme un oiseau de malheur à bord de ton vaisseau en lambeaux.
N'attends de moi nul pardon pour ton odieux crime.
Pour des siècles et des siècles, tu seras mon message
sur la mer, Hollandais.
À ceux qui se croient au-dessus des lois de la mer, tu annonceras la fin. Malheur à qui croquera ta route.
Ne plonge pas sur ton sort, car ton châtiment survive la vie de tes marins.
Maintenant rejoins-moi dans les profondeurs.

Quand l'équipage cessa à la fois, le plus cruel crève et le vent sifflait plus qu'une douce brise.
Le soleil brillait. Sous leurs pieds, du sable blanc remplissait le pont brisé de leur faïence.
À perte de vue, une longue plage s'étendait.

Il son sur la mer, le courant eut un grand froc-mis
sortir des flots, prendre de la vitesse et s'élever au-dessus de la houle malgré ses voiles en lambeaux.

They let me do all the things that are forbidden at home – which is A LOT of things. But the best thing about them is their dog. I just love him! He's always causing little disasters. His name is Oups, you can guess why..."

Abi and her family move to Mandore, a small town surrounded by hills and forests. Her parents and older brother settle in quickly, but for Abi, things are not so easy...

One day, in the forest, in the middle of a wild clearing, she meets two boys who seem to come from another time: Chops and Pipe. They make her swear not to tell anyone about them but their friendship brings a lot of comfort to Abi.

Abi also starts experiencing visions in which she sees things she is not supposed to know about... But the more she sees of Chops and Pipe, the more she believes her visions to be true. So much so that one morning, thanks to one of them, Abi manages to save her mother from a fatal accident.
